LHSAA President’s Letter

Lincoln High School Alumni Association Archives

For the past 25 years the LHSAA has been collecting, sorting and storing LHS memorabilia. A call went out to alumni for donations in honor of Lincoln's 125th anniversary; Harris Matarazzo scoured LHS for yearbooks, documents and other items that had been lost or misplaced; Board members and volunteers helped sort and get the archives started, and Ron Brentano from the Oregon Historical Society gave a presentation on proper storage, cataloging, and preservation. Carolyn Jackson over the years spent Thursdays in the storage unit sorting and archiving new donations. Without this dedicated group important pieces of Lincoln's history would have been lost.

Lincoln High School will celebrate 150 years as a public institution, April 2019. To honor this occasion, The Friends of Lincoln generously provided financial support to hire archivist Katie Bush (completing a masters in Public History at PSU) and Lincoln student Caitlyn Aldersea (2018-19 Student Body Co-President) to continue the sorting, cataloging, preservation and digitizing of the archives. Principal Peyton Chapman offered work space at Lincoln (June 15-August 15th) and on June 16th Alum Scott Cress brought his Lincoln High School Alumni Association Archives company truck and the archives were successfully moved from a storage unit to Lincoln.

As they say, it takes a village and once again Lincoln Alumni pitched in. Dana Cress, Chet Orloff and David Perlman got the ball rolling by finding and hiring Katie; bought moving boxes, protective covering, and assisted in the moving. The alumni association purchased a computer for cataloging and digitizing the collection for research, public access and future generations. If you are interested in helping with this project or would like to visit, please contact Katie at ThelHSArchives@gmail.com.

Thank you!

What an Exciting Time – By Peyton Chapman, Principal, LHS

Dear Lincoln Alumni,

What an exciting time to serve as Lincoln’s Principal. As we are preparing for our 150th school year we are reflecting on the wonders and woes of the past as well as the possibilities and hopes for our future. As we look at old photos and memorabilia we are reminded daily that democracy, the arts, and support for civil rights have grown in our public schools. Our goal in September of 2017 was to plan a year’s worth of engaging, relevant, fun and impactful activities to help reconnect alumni and their families. We also hoped to build community and a renewed appreciation for the value of Portland’s urban public schools.

Each month Lincoln will be hosting “CardTalks” with an inspiring line up of guest speakers including Gerry Frank, futurist Ali Draud, and historian Chet Orloff just to name a few. On April 13, 2019 Geni Director and Ann Johnson will be co-hosting “The Big Party” for 1500 alumni, current families and friends of Lincoln at the PSU Viking Pavilion to honor the shared history between both schools. Recruitment of faculty over the last few years has focused on hiring for collaboration, innovation, and global orientation. Our teachers have worked hard to create a wide array of engaging programs of study from Mindfulness/Movement classes (In partnership with Peace in the Schools Program) to Ethnic Studies and Hip Hop/Cultural Exploration and Critical Race Studies to Sustainable Gardening and Agriculture classes. Our IB program has grown to include courses such as IB Philosophy, IB Business, IB Political Economy, IB Geography, IB Music, and IB Computer Science. Over 85% of our students take at least one IB course with 20-25% electing for the full IB Diploma program. Lincoln now also offers Career Technical Education classes (CTE) with dual credit options in Accounting, Business Marketing and Management, Culinary Arts, Mass Communications and Media, and Product Design. We are in the process of adding CTE programs in Computer Science, Robotics, and we are exploring Manufacturing and Construction/Construction Management pathways.

LHSAA ENDOWMENT FUND is going on 20 Years—Looking Beyond

— By Carolyn Mae Jackson, ’55

May I ask a question? Is it time? Is it time to look beyond the many thoughts, the hard, hard work, and the critics? Look to a place in time that is tangible evidence to a realistic future. Working with today’s youth, a person like myself living as a senior resident, I find I need to be more open to change.

I should take time to try harder to understand just how will these youth survive? Grand plans and grand ideals, such as “will take a year to travel and have a special study program in …………” or “will go to a University in the Midwest, a thousand miles away from my family, to get the 1st of my degrees so I can continue studying to be a Lawyer and defend ……….” Perhaps “I will save a forest or find a new cure.”

Today’s young Lincoln students look to a future that might be uncertain, hopefully not blinded by what it takes to get those plans to a working project.

Additional education after high school seems to be what is needed. Looking toward a career choice or a future that interests them. A college or additional classes seeking to build toward a position in the future world that will give hope for more than just an ordinary life.

The LHSAA Endowment Fund enables individuals, organizations and others a way to a future that interests them. A college or additional education after high school seems to be radically more mature and sophisticated than we students in the 1950s.

Today at age 80 I can look back on those high school years with appreciation for the excellent teachers and with fondness for my dear friends, most of whom have passed away. Meanwhile, my life continues to march smartly along, thanks to good health and many interests in my community.

I am a great example of how life changes as we mature. As a graduate of OSU in 1959, I taught school in Portland, Japan, Okinawa and California. After meeting a wonderful man, David Buck, we started our married life at Stanford, where he was working on his Ph.D. David became a professor at the University of Wisconsin in Milwaukee, and my next 15 years were spent helping to raise our two sons.

During these years my interest in art matured, and I became a potter with a home workshop. I worked as a volunteer docent at the Milwaukee Art Museum, and returned as staff after receiving a master’s degree in museum education at George Washington University. A family adventure for a year in England changed my direction and pursuit to outdoor sculpture. In the 1990s I wrote the seminal book on outdoor sculpture in Milwaukee. From there I became interested in the restoration of historic monuments, and since then have led projects to find people and resources for the restoration of more than a dozen historic sculptures. Today I continue to serve on the board of Milwaukee County Historical Society and other non-profits in my community.

While at Lincoln High School I began to learn to play tennis. At that time tennis courts in Washington Park were used by Lincoln High School; however, real progress in the sport did not happen quickly. Most of my advancement in tennis skills came after the birth of our sons. Tennis is a competitive and satisfying sport for me; last year my USTA team of “Women 65 years and over” won the SE Wisconsin division. This year we may do it again.

You can see why I feel completely blessed for my continued vibrant life that really began at LHS those many years ago. Of course, my parents and husband helped along the way.

It really does take a Village!

Mr. Baily Retires after 50 Years

At Portland’s Lincoln High School, he was Mr. Baily. No first name. When alums would run into current students, they’d ask if Mr. Baily was still teaching.

He was. Until last week.

Mr. Baily retired at 73, ending a 50-year career at the only school where he ever worked.

He never married. No kids. During his career, he taught an estimated 12,500 students, more than the population of some small Oregon towns. It’s fitting this column appears on Father’s Day. Those who know him best say the students are his family.

Don’t, however, expect heart-on-the-sleeve emotion from the man. When asked why he decided to retire, he answers like an employee filling out a personnel form: “It was time. I didn’t want to leave when I was sick of teaching.”

Newspaper style requires David Bailey be called Mr. Bailey. That’s too strange. So, forget the rules. To the senior class to fund a scholarship each year he gave his own money to continue an annual painting lanes on the school’s track. Bailey called out, saying he heard Montgomery was studying Russian. That, the teacher said, made Montgomery a communist.

“I knew that he was testing me,” said Montgomery. “And then a reply came to me, ever so slowly. ‘You’re the one using the red paint, Mr. Bailey.’”

When Mr. Bailey flashed Montgomery a smile, the student knew it was high praise. Joey Sato, who was studying Russian.

“Don’t get over it, you get beyond it. Lincoln has always been a tough place because there have always been high expectations from the parents. But it’s easy in the classroom because the kids want to learn.”

During his career, he applied the same standards to freshmen as he did to seniors, telling them to strive and work hard. His favorite moment, he said, was attending graduation, getting to watch each student receive a diploma.

Rick Montgomery, a student at Lincoln in the early 1980s, said students, teachers, parents and even principals were threatened by what he called Mr. Bailey’s enlightened, aggressive, innovative and take-no-prisoners way of teaching.

“He tested me personally, many times. Each time, I felt like throwing up. But I was stronger afterwards.”

The Cantora by Paul D. Cohn, class of ’54

It all began with a rumor: an Indian girl who sang with the voice of an angel. A tiny girl, perhaps only nine years old. No one believed it at first, but the rumor persisted. Finally one day a runner arrived bringing news… And so the journey of the woman and the girl—Sister Mãe da Doçura and Yema, the Caeté Indian child acclaimed as The Cantora—begins to unfold as perilous circumstance compels them to become agents of fate, changing the destinies of all who cross their path.

The setting for The Cantora is coastal Brazil during the early 1500s, in the colonial town of Luís, a shipping port for the brutal and lucrative dyewood trade. Many Indians and Africans are enslaved at the port, and the Indians, afflicted with European diseases, are perishing by the hundreds.

A village priest discovers an Indian child with a magical voice, and he allows her to sing the Latin Mass. The regional bishop assigns the girl to Sister Doçura with the intention of making the child sing a ward of the Church. The child is also treasured by her tribe as a mystical Tuguy Kasitá (Blood Woman).

The bishop summons The Vatican’s Consilium de Virtutibus (The Council of Miracles) to certify Yema as a The First True Miracle of The New World, but when an Indian rebellion breaks out, the Council accuses the nun and child of heresy and condemns them to death as Doçura and Yema are forced to flee for their lives.

Dear Fellow Lincoln Alumni,
Having been recently elected President of the Lincoln High School Alumni Association, I feel it’s a great opportunity to express my thoughts about our organization.

First, it’s an exciting time to be part of the Lincoln alumni because the school is celebrating its 150th anniversary. We are one of the first public schools in the West and Lincoln has produced some amazing graduates who have contributed greatly to our school, our community and the world. LHSAA was started in conjunction with the 125th, so it’s fitting that we can now renew our commitment to make our organization even better. We will start our “L150” celebration this year and continue into 2019 with many events and opportunities for alumni to re-connect with their classmates and the school. We have also started to organize and catalogue our archives, which we plan to use in an exhibit at the Oregon Historical Society next year as well as a permanent archive in the new building.

As the leader of our organization, I feel we can do much better at reaching out to our alumni and facilitating their engagement with our organization and Lincoln. We intend to improve our use of social media to provide information and opportunities for alumni to connect with each other and Lincoln. In the coming months, you will see upgrades to our website and other platforms. We also want to improve our data base of alumni contacts which will allow us to reach you more effectively.

As always, please reach out to us with your ideas and energy. We are a totally volunteer group and rely on our members for support, both financially and otherwise. We definitely appreciate all the ways you contribute. If you are not a member of LHSAA, I encourage you to join us.

Thank you and GO CARDS!

David Perlman ’65
